Sunday Editions for HIGH SCHOOLS Available (free)

We have a free publication available called Speaking of a Free Press. It is 25 pages of quotations about freedom of the press and the First Amendment. Some of these are quotes you have heard before and some are new. This is a great resource for journalism, civics, government and American history teachers. Many of the quotations can spark some lively classroom debate. The recent Knight Foundation research showed that many students do not understand the First Amendment or are apathetic about it. Some of these quotations will make them think!

Our High Schools are the weakest area for newspaper readers, yet these are the students who are preparing for their role in society within a short time. The only stipulation to this free program is your school should commit to receiving and utilizing the newspapers as an informational text tool for the school year. It is with consistency that using the newspaper, as a teaching tool will enhance test scores. Newspaper reading will prepare students for SAT s better than SAT study guides.

Sponsorship funds are available to provide HIGH SCHOOL students the Sunday edition of the W-S Journal during the upcoming school year.

You can receive the Speaking of a Free Press publication along with 25 copies of the Sunday W-S Journal September through May. On our website you will find Scavenger Hunts, FREE materials from Parade Classroom (excellent for high school students) and other teacher's materials- FREE

Our Website: <http://nie.journalnow.com>

Sponsorship funds are limited. If your school would like be a part of this program, return this form quickly. This will be first come first serve.

The Sunday edition is delivered by Wednesday or sooner of the following week. This gives you a chance to look over the newspaper before it arrives at school to pick out the best reading, writing and discussion articles.
